

Willy The Wonderboy

This fool made the mistake of listing "Lines of Credit" in his first SPAM email to make his fake company look more real. Unfortunately for him, he is an idiot and doesn't know what a Line of Credit is. This bait was only two days long. He was online at the same time as me, and all of our emails except for the last one happened in day one...

If you read my email, then you would see that I asked for a Line of Credit. What is all of this nonsense that you sent me?

Debbie

What do you mean by nonsense.if you dont need a loan,seek somewhere else.okay.nonsense

I asked about a Line of Credit. Did you read this in my email? On the email that you originally sent, you say that you offer them, so I am assuming that you know what one is. I was inquiring about a Line of Credit and you sent me terms for what looks like a conventional loan. And where did you get the 10 years from? Did you just make that up? That's what I meant by nonsense.

Notice down below where I highlighted in red where you say you issue Lines of Credit. Why are you sending me conventional loan terms?

Debbie

His first email is copied here which does say Lines of Credit...

Our Line of Credit gives you automatic access to funds whenever and wherever you want them -- up to $50,000, or even more with a Line of Credit secured by the equity in your home1 .

A Line of Credit also gives you competitive interest rates and a host of flexible financial options that put you in control.Whether you're making everyday purchases or an extraordinary one, a TD Canada Trust Line of Credit can give you the flexibility and control you need to make it happen

This is hilarious! He looks up on another website to see what a line of credit is. He copies and pastes the info he finds into an email to make it look like he wrote it, but unfortunately for him, he also copies the bank name from the website he copied it from.

Okay, now I don't understand why you copied and pasted this from the TD Canada Trust Bank website and sent it to me? First of all, I requested an $80,000.00 Line of Credit, not $50,000.00, and second why are you copying it from this website to send?

Debbie

I am only trying to explain to you.even if you need a line of credit.i need to give you terms.okay

Are you saying that you had to go to a competitor’s website and copy data from their website to an email to me explaining your terms and a description of a line of credit???

Debbie

I give you terms allready . if you need a loan why don’t you do a transfer loan it is much easier.okay

You gave me terms for a conventional loan, not a Line of Credit. I want a Line of Credit and in your first email you said that you offer them (even though you need to look up what one is on another website). If you can’t send me terms for a line of credit I may have to look elsewhere.

Debbie

This is no joke and if you are seroius then nothing would stop you from getting this loan from us okay. If you want tranfer loan then fill in the form we provide if not then do not email agian.

Are you freaking kidding me???

Debbie

Hello? Are you there? I would like some information on a floating- capital, adjustable rate mortgage REFI. The principal sum will depend on the leading market indices and the depreciable amount will be the drop- percentage of the capital gain minus the Producer Price Index. I will need to procure this loan in the next 72 hours to take advantage of the price discrepancy between the preferred outstanding shares and the amortizable convertible debentures. I understand that all fees with be capitalized over the loan’s term of maturity with the ability to purchase the percentage points to achieve a higher rate of return. If you have any freaking idea what I am talking about, shove a knife in your throat. If you do not, please shove a knife in your throat. Awaiting your prompt reply. Thanks.

Debbie

My last email to this moron was a few days after the previous one. I already knew that he gave up the scam on me because he is an idiot and already made a fool of himself. I will re-bait this moron under a new persona!
